In this context, the In a Phase I study, COVAXIN has shown strong antibody response against spike (S1) protein, receptor binding domain (RBD) and SARS-CoV-2 nucleocapsid (N) protein. More importantly, the 5-star analyst added, COVAXIN also induces comparable levels of neutralizing antibodies in the human healing serum, which, the analyst believes, bodes well for the success of the ongoing Phase III study in India. Over the next few weeks, Ocugen is expected to meet with the FDA to discuss the development of COVAX. However, since the details of the final agreement have not yet been finalized, in addition to the current lack of insight into the U.S. regulatory path or business strategy, Ramakanth remains sidelined for now. Consequently, the analyst assesses OCGN as neutral (i.e. Hold) without recommending a price target. (To view Ramakanth's story, click here) By contrast, all 3 other analysts who have recently posted Ocugen's review rate on share buy. However, the Strong Buy consensus rating is backed by a $0.9 price target, which means a downside of 68% at current levels. This is likely due to a meteoric rise in stocks and the inability of analysts to reverse new price targets so quickly. Investor Business Daily GE's turnaround has won over more believers on Wall Street, and the Boeing 737 Max will return to service soon. Can GE stock be bought now? Last week, Moderna's (MRNA) Covid-19 vaccine candidate for mRNA-1273 received the second approved vaccine in the U.S. after it received an emergency use permit from the FDA. And on Tuesday, National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (Niaid) Director Anthony Fauci administered the first dose of the vaccine live on TV. But in response to the good news, coronavirus stocks have come under pressure this week over concerns the current batch of vaccines will not be effective against the new Covid-19 strain that has recently emerged in the UK. Moderna is currently testing its vaccine against a new fast-spreading option, but Wall Street's most prominent Moderna bear remains skeptical of stock prospects. Whether the vaccine proves effective against the new strain or not, it doesn't make any difference to Leerink analyst Mani Foroohar. The analyst reiterated the under-execution (i.e. Sales) rating of MRNA shares with a $69 price target. This figure indicates a steep 47% descent from the current level. (To view The Trout's record, click here) Simply put, Foroohar believes Moderna's current valuation and consensus estimates are all goodness already baked, which therefore distorts the risk/reward sharply on the downside. The analyst hopes the stock will remain volatile as investor discussions about the business and execution risk will come to the fore. The Moderna problem has been exacerbated by a number of other factors, says the analyst. The mRNA-1273 represents the bulk of the company's revenue opportunity, and is the main driver of the part of the performance. In addition, efforts to combat the virus are a global problem that is likely to cause additional pressure from multiple sources. As we are in the midst of a global buildout of power analogous to the Manhattan project of vaccines, Trout agreed, We see excessive capacity, high competitive intensity and likely long-term structural characteristics in the final markets of the vaccine, presenting secular problems to sub-players such as MRNA. What does the rest of the street think? Looking at the consensus breakdown, the opinions of other analysts are more common. 7 Buys, 7 Holds and 2 Sells add up to moderate buy consensus. In addition, the $148.31 average price target of ~14% shows upside potential. Occidental Petroleum Corporation (NYSE: OXY) is one of the most leveraged stocks in oil recovery, according to BofA Securities. The Occidental Analyst: Doug Leggate maintained the Buy rating of Occidental Petroleum, with a price target of $29. The Occidental Tesis: The Company's stock came under considerable pressure and has paid the price of its capital structure heavily weighted toward debt, Leggate said in a note. He added, however, that Occidental Petroleum will benefit thanks to its oil leverage now that is on the rise in oil prices. The analyst noted that the company had extended its debt terms to 2023. Strong operating results in recent months have been overshadowed by concerns about portfolio downturns and management, which led to a $30 WTI at the company's break-even. On closer inspection, we believe it is conservative on both measures, Leggate wrote in a statement.
